Chapter 3 INDIA'S DEFENCE SYSTEM

The Government of India is responsible for ensuring the defence of India and every part thereof. The President is the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces. The Raksha Mantri (Defence Minister) is the head of the Ministry of Defence. In addition National Security Advisor is also appointed to advise the Prime Minister On national security.

The Ministry of Defence And Its Departments

After independence, the Ministry of Defence was created under the charge of a Cabinet Minister. The principal task of the Ministry is to implement the Government's policy directions and the execution of approved programmes within the allocated resources. The various Departments of the Ministry are as follows:

O Department of Defence

The Department of Defence is responsible for the defence budget, defence policy, matters relating to parliament, defence co-operation with foreign countries, etc.

O Department of Defence Production

Department of Defence Production deals with matters pertaining to defence production, indigenisation of imported stores, equipment and spares, planning and control of departmental defence equipment production agencies i.e. Ordnance factories and defence public sector units.

O Department of Defence Research and Development

Its function is to advise the Government on scientific aspects of military equipment. It plans for research and development of weapons through its research laboratories.

O Department of Ex-Servicemen's Welfare

Department of Ex-Servicemen's Welfare deals with all resettlement, welfare and pension matters of Ex-Servicemen.

O The Department of Military Affairs

This Department deals with the Armed Forces of the Union namely, Army, Navy and Air Force; Integrated Headquarters of the Ministry of Defence; the Territorial Army; Works relating to the three services etc. The Department promotes jointness among the three Services.

O The Armed Forces

The armed forces comprise the three armed services under the Ministry of Defence, they are:-

- Army.
- Navy
- Air Force.

The primary role of the armed services is to protect the sovereignty of the nation from external aggression, however when called upon they can also assist the government to face any natural disaster or internal security threat, strife or unrest.
